Facts

10) Plaintiff Lisa Caramanis legally and properly filed a United States Utility Patent Application directed to her invention for a Combined Seat Belt Cover and Pillow on July 13, 2000.

11) United States Patent No. 6,409,271 (hereinafter "the '271 patent"), entitled Combined Seat Belt Cover and Pillow, a true and correct copy of which is appended hereto as Exhibit A, legally and regularly issued to Ms. Caramanis on June 25, 2002.

12) There are no assignees to the '271 patent, there are no persons or entities other than Plaintiff with a right to sublicense or enforce the '271 patent, and no persons or entities other than Plaintiff have a financial interest in the '271 patent.

13) Plaintiff is the sole inventor of the combined seat belt cover and pillow disclosed and protected by the '271 patent, and Plaintiff is the sole owner of all right, title, and interest thereto thereby establishing Plaintiff's right to exclude others from making, using, offering to sell, or selling in the United States or importing into the United States any device within the scope of coverage provided by the ‘271 patent.

14) This is the first time a complaint alleging infringement of the ‘271 patent has been filed.

15) Defendant SeatPets has marketed and sold and, on information and belief, does still market and sell combined seat belt cover and pillow devices without permission from or compensation to Plaintiff.

16) Plaintiff showed embodiments of her combined seatbelt cover and pillow to persons in and around Newburyport, Massachusetts, the location of SeatPets’ headquarters, and the combined seatbelt cover and pillow devices sold by SeatPets appear to be direct knock-offs of Plaintiff’s patented devices, even including a cat and a dog as illustrated in the ‘271 patent.

17) Over ten years after Plaintiff filed her patent application, Ciampitti, Ablow, and Roback, together with Defendant SeatPets as assignee, filed their own patent application, entitled Huggable Plush Seatbelt Cover, directed to the combined seat belt cover and pillow in at least the United States, Australia, Canada, and internationally under the Patent Cooperation Treaty.

18) Ciampitti, Ablow, Roback, and SeatPets were already aware of Plaintiff’s ‘271 patent at least by the time they filed their U.S. Utility Patent Application on April 13, 2012.

19) The combined seat belt cover and pillow devices made and sold by Defendant Seatpets include each and every element of at least claims 1, 4, 6, and potentially further claims of the ‘271 patent such that the devices plainly and literally infringe on the ‘271 patent.

20) Claim 1 of the ‘271 patent is separated into its limitations below, and actual embodiments of the combined seat belt cover and pillow sold by SeatPets are depicted and shown to meet each limitation literally.

1. A combined seat belt cover and pillow for use relative to a vehicular seat belt arrangement with at least one elongate seat belt to enhance the comfort and safety of a vehicular occupant, the combined seat belt cover and pillow comprising:

an elongate seat belt cover with a first end, a second end, an elongate body portion, and a means for surrounding at least a portion of the elongate seat belt;

and a pillow coupled to the elongate seat belt cover adjacent to the first end of the elongate seat belt cover whereby the elongate body portion of the elongate seat belt cover extends away from the pillow in a single direction only toward the second end of the elongate seat belt cover; whereby the combined seat belt cover and pillow can be coupled to the elongate seat belt of the vehicular seat belt arrangement with the elongate seat belt cover providing cushioning between the elongate seat belt and the vehicular occupant and dispersing a force of the elongate seat belt against the vehicular occupant and with the pillow providing added lateral cushioning for the head of the vehicular occupant.

21) Regarding claim 4, the combined seat belt cover and pillow device sold by SeatPets has an elongate seat belt cover that is padded whereby claim 4 is literally infringed.

22) Further, in the combined seat belt cover and pillow device sold by SeatPets, "the elongate seat belt cover and the pillow cooperate to simulate a head and a body of an animal wherein the pillow simulates the head of the animal and the elongate seat belt cover simulates at least a portion of the body of the animal" as claim 6 requires so that it too is literally infringed.

23) Each known combined seat belt cover and pillow device made and sold by SeatPets, including but not necessarily limited to those sold under the SeatPets mark as "Love Bug the Ladybug," "Bentley the Dog," "Lincoln the Lion," "Mercedes the Cat," "Malibu the Monkey," and each of the various monster versions of the device including "Whish," "Awty (Are We There Yet)" and "Airheart," literally meets all limitations of one or more claims of the '271 patent.

24) Plaintiff provided express written notice of the '271 patent and of Defendants' alleged infringement thereof to Defendants SeatPets and, in so doing, to Keith Ablow, MD, Michael Noll, Amber Roback, and Robert Ciampitti, Jr.

25) Indeed, in a letter to Defendant SeatPets, Plaintiff advised, "Your client has direct knowledge of the '271 patent, and no reasonable argument against infringement exists. If your client chooses to continue making and selling these combined seat belt covers and pillows, it will do so with objectively reckless disregard for my client's patent rights."

26) The pre-suit notification identified United States Patent No. 6,409,271, identified Ms. Caramanis as the '271 patent's inventor and owner, identified the accused products, and explained with particularity how the accused products meet the limitations of one or more claims of the '271 patent.

27) Despite having notice of the ‘271 patent and their alleged infringement thereof, Defendant SeatPets continued and still does continue manufacturing, marketing, and selling the accused combined seat belt cover and pillow devices unabated and without substantial change whereby the infringement is in all respects willful.

28) Moreover, Defendant SeatPets’ has licensed and, in so doing, induced Defendants Jay Franco and Jay at Play to manufacture, market, and/or sell combined seat belt cover and pillow devices in the United States.

29) The combined seat belt cover and pillow devices sold by Defendants Jay Franco and Jay at Play include each and every element of at least claims 1, 4, 6, and potentially further claims of the ‘271 patent such that the devices plainly and literally infringe on the ‘271 patent.

30) Defendant SeatPets and Michael Noll, Amber Roback, Robert Ciampitti, Jr., and Keith Ablow, MD knew or should have known their actions would induce actual infringement by Defendants Jay Franco and Jay at Play.

31) Defendants Jay Franco and Jay at Play’s sale of the accused combined seat belt cover and pillow devices continues in Massachusetts and throughout the United States.

32) Defendants Jay Franco and Jay at Play marketed and sold and do market and sell the combined seat belt cover and pillow devices without permission from or compensation to Plaintiff.

33) Defendants SeatPets, Jay Franco, and Jay at Play have purposefully conducted systematic and continuous activity in and toward Massachusetts, including by shipping the accused products into Massachusetts through established distribution channels, and the patent infringement alleged herein arises out of those activities.

34) Each known combined seat belt cover and pillow device made and sold by Defendants Jay Franco and Jay at Play, including but not necessarily limited to those sold under the SeatPets mark as the SeatPets Ladybug, Dog, Lion, Cat, and Monkey is substantially identical in construction to the devices sold by SeatPets, and each literally meets all limitations of one or more claims of the ‘271 patent.

35) Defendants Jay at Play and Jay Franco share a physical address, packaging for the accused products sold by Defendants Jay at Play and Jay Franco includes only that shared address, email addresses for officers of Defendant Jay at Play use the domain name of Defendant Jay Franco, officers for Defendant Jay at Play list the shared physical address with Defendant Jay Franco as their contact address, officers for Defendant Jay at Play list the same telephone number as Defendant Jay Franco as their telephone contact, officers of Defendant Jay at Play are listed as officers of Defendant Jay Franco, and Defendant Jay Franco is the owner of the JAY AT PLAY federally registered trademark and other intellectual property used by Defendant Jay at Play.

36) Defendant Jay Franco at times identifies Defendant Jay at Play as a division of Defendant Jay Franco rather than as a subsidiary.

37) Defendant Jay at Play is the alter ego and agent of Defendant Jay Franco, and its actions as alleged herein have been controlled and induced by and to the benefit of Defendant Jay Franco.

38) On information and belief, Michael Noll is Chief Executive Officer of SeatPets and has, together with Amber Roback, Robert Ciampitti, Jr., and Keith Ablow, MD, personally participated in, induced, approved, directed, ordered, and/or controlled the manufacture, marketing, sale of the infringing goods by Defendant SeatPets, the continued sale of such goods after notice of the ‘271 patent, and the licensing of infringing products to Defendants Jay Franco and Jay at Play.

39) On information and belief, Amber Roback is Chief Operating Officer of SeatPets and has, together with Michael Noll, Robert Ciampitti, Jr., and Keith Ablow, MD, personally participated in, induced, approved, directed, ordered, and/or controlled the manufacture, marketing, sale of the infringing goods by Defendant SeatPets, the continued sale of such goods after notice of the '271 patent, and the licensing of infringing products to Defendants Jay Franco and Jay at Play.

40) On information and belief, Robert Ciampitti, Jr. is a Managing Member of SeatPets and has, together with Michael Noll, Amber Roback, and Keith Ablow, MD, personally participated in, induced, approved, directed, ordered, and/or controlled the manufacture, marketing, sale of the infringing goods by Defendant SeatPets, the continued sale of such goods after notice of the '271 patent, and the licensing of infringing products to Defendants Jay Franco and Jay at Play.

41) On information and belief, Keith Ablow, MD is a Managing Member of SeatPets and has, together with Michael Noll, Amber Roback, and Robert Ciampitti, Jr., personally participated in, induced, approved, directed, ordered, and/or controlled the manufacture, marketing, sale of the infringing goods by Defendant SeatPets, the continued sale of such goods after notice of the '271 patent, and the licensing of infringing products to Defendants Jay Franco and Jay at Play.

Count I

6,409,271, and Plaintiff has the authority to bring this suit.

44) Defendant SeatPets has been and now is directly infringing the '271 patent in the United States by, among other things, making, using, importing, offering for sale, and/or selling combined seat belt cover and pillow devices that fall within the scope of protection afforded by the '271 patent in the United States in violation of 35 U.S.C. § 271.

45) To the extent that facts learned in discovery prove the personal and/or direct liability of Robert Ciampitti, Jr., Michael Noll, Amber Roback, and Keith Ablow, MD, Plaintiff reserves the right to add those persons as parties in accordance with the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

46) Further, to the extent that facts learned in discovery prove that SeatPets' and, if applicable, Robert Ciampitti, Jr.'s, Michael Noll's, Amber Roback's, and/or Keith Ablow, MD's, infringement of the '271 patent is or has been willful, Plaintiff reserves the right to request such a finding at the time of trial.

47) As a result of Defendant's infringing activities, Plaintiff has been and will be damaged whereby Plaintiff is entitled to compensation from Defendant pursuant to 35 U.S.C. § 284 in an amount that cannot presently be quantified but that will be ascertained at trial.

48) Because the harm that Plaintiff is incurring and will incur in the future is substantially impossible to determine with precision, Plaintiff has no adequate remedy at law to redress such future infringement, and Plaintiff will suffer immediate and irreparable harm if the future infringement is not prevented. Accordingly, Plaintiff, having a reasonable likelihood of success on the merits of this case, is entitled to injunctive relief as set forth in 35 U.S.C. § 283 to prevent further infringement by Defendant.

Count II
Inducement of Infringement and/or Contributory Infringement of U.S. Patent No. 6,409,271 by SeatPets, LLC

49) Plaintiff incorporates by reference all allegations set forth in Paragraphs one (1) through forty-eight (48) of this Complaint.

50) Plaintiff is the sole owner of all right, title, and interest in and to U.S. Patent No. 6,409,271, and Plaintiff has the authority to bring this suit.

51) Defendant SeatPets has induced infringement of and/or contributed to the infringement of the '271 patent in the United States by, among other things, inducing Jay Franco & Sons, Inc., and/or Jay at Play, Int'l HK Ltd. to make, use, import, offer for sale, and/or sell combined seat belt cover and pillow devices that fall within the scope of protection afforded by the '271 patent in the United States in violation of 35 U.S.C. § 271.

52) To the extent that facts learned in discovery prove the personal and/or direct liability of Robert Ciampitti, Jr., Michael Noll, Amber Roback, and Keith Ablow, MD for inducing and/or contributing to the infringement of the '271 patent, Plaintiff reserves the right to add those persons as parties in accordance with the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

53) Further, to the extent that facts learned in discovery prove that SeatPets' and, if applicable, Robert Ciampitti, Jr.'s, Michael Noll's, Amber Roback's, and/or Keith Ablow, MD's, induced and/or contributory infringement of the '271 patent is or has been willful, Plaintiff reserves the right to request such a finding at the time of trial.

54) As a result of Defendant's infringing activities, Plaintiff has been and will be damaged whereby Plaintiff is entitled to compensation from Defendant pursuant to 35 U.S.C. § 284 in an amount that cannot presently be quantified but that will be ascertained at trial.

55) Because the harm that Plaintiff is incurring and will incur in the future is substantially impossible to determine with precision, Plaintiff has no adequate remedy at law to redress such future infringement, and Plaintiff will suffer immediate and irreparable harm if the future infringement is not prevented. Accordingly, Plaintiff, having a reasonable likelihood of success on the merits of this case, is entitled to injunctive relief as set forth in 35 U.S.C. § 283 to prevent further inducement of infringement and/or contributory infringement by Defendant.

59) To the extent that facts learned in discovery prove that Jay Franco & Sons, Inc. and/or Jay at Play, Int'l HK Ltd.'s infringement of the '271 patent is or has been willful, Plaintiff reserves the right to request such a finding at the time of trial.

60) As a result of Defendants' infringing activities, Plaintiff has been and will be damaged whereby Plaintiff is entitled to compensation from Defendants pursuant to 35 U.S.C. § 284 in an amount that cannot presently be quantified but that will be ascertained at trial.

61) Because the harm that Plaintiff is incurring and will incur in the future is substantially impossible to determine with precision, Plaintiff has no adequate remedy at law to redress such future infringement, and Plaintiff will suffer immediate and irreparable harm if the future infringement is not prevented. Accordingly, Plaintiff, having a reasonable likelihood of success on the merits of this case, is entitled to injunctive relief as set forth in 35 U.S.C. § 283 to prevent further infringement by Defendants.
